

IN THE UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
DISTRICT OF SOUTH CAROLINA
AIKEN DIVISION

Garcia Wilson,

Plaintiff,

v.

South Carolina Department of Corrections,
Warden Richard Cothran, Warden Willie Eagleton, Correctional Officer McFadden,
et al.

Defendants.

Civil Action No. 1:17-3032-RMG

ORDER AND OPINION

Before the Court is the report and recommendation (“R & R”) of the Magistrate Judge (Dkt. No. 27) recommending that the Court deny Defendants’ motion for summary judgment (Dkt. No. 14). For the reasons set forth below, the Court adopts the R & R as the Order of the Court and denies Defendants’ motion for summary judgment.

I. Background

Plaintiff Garcia Wilson brought this suit pursuant to 42 U.S.C. § 1983, claiming that Defendants violated his constitutional rights by failing to protect him from inmate violence and using excessive force while Plaintiff was incarcerated in the custody of the South Carolina Department of Corrections (“SCDC”). Plaintiff alleges several specific incidents in which SCDC employees assisted in attacking Plaintiff or failed to prevent attacks by inmates including, for example, that on October 27, 2016 Defendant Parker allowed five inmates to enter Plaintiff’s cell to beat and rob him; that on June 2, 2017 Defendant Gillespie allowed five inmates to enter Plaintiff’s cell to stab and rob him; and that on August 16, 2017 Defendant West curtailed Plaintiff’s visit from counsel to seize Plaintiff’s paperwork, allegedly in retaliation for Plaintiff having filed a lawsuit. (Dkt. No. 1-1 ¶¶ 50-53, 68-76, 81-91.)

Defendants moved for summary judgment (Dkt. No. 14), Plaintiff filed a response in opposition (Dkt. No. 15) and Defendants replied (Dkt. No. 25). Defendants objected to the Magistrate Judge's R & R. (Dkt. No. 34.)

II. Legal Standard

A. Review of the R & R

The Magistrate Judge makes only a recommendation to the Court that has no presumptive weight and, therefore, the responsibility to make a final determination remains with the Court. See, e.g., Mathews v. Weber, 423 U.S. 261, 270-71 (1976). The Court may “accept, reject, or modify, in whole or in part, the findings or recommendations made by the magistrate judge.” 28 U.S.C. § 636(b)(1)(C). Where there are specific objections to the R & R, the Court “makes a de novo determination of those portions of the report or specified proposed findings or recommendations to which objection is made.” Id. In the absence of objections, the Court reviews the R & R to “only satisfy itself that there is no clear error on the face of the record in order to accept the recommendation.” Fed. R. Civ. P. 72 advisory committee's note. Where there are no objections, the Court need not give any explanation for adopting the Magistrate Judge's analysis and recommendation. See, e.g., Camby v. Davis, 718 F.2d 198, 199 (4th Cir. 1983) (“In the absence of objection . . . we do not believe that it requires any explanation.”).

B. Motion for Summary Judgment

Summary judgment is appropriate if the movant “shows that there is no genuine dispute as to any material fact” and it is therefore entitled to judgment as a matter of law. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(a). In other words, summary judgment should be granted “only when it is clear that there is no dispute concerning either the facts of the controversy or the inferences to be drawn from those facts.” Pulliam Inv. Co. v. Cameo Props., 810 F.2d 1282, 1286 (4th Cir. 1987). “In determining whether a genuine issue has been raised, the court must construe all inferences and ambiguities in favor of the nonmoving party.” HealthSouth Rehab. Hosp. v. Am. Nat’l Red Cross, 101 F.3d 1005, 1008 (4th Cir. 1996).

The party seeking summary judgment has the initial burden of demonstrating to the court that there is no genuine issue of material fact. Celotex Corp. v. Catrett, 477 U.S. 317, 323 (1986). Once the moving party has made this threshold demonstration, the non-moving party, to survive the motion for summary judgment, may not rest on the allegations averred in his pleadings. Id. at 324. Rather, the non-moving party must demonstrate that specific, material facts exist that give rise to a genuine issue. Id. Under this standard, “[c]onclusory or speculative allegations do not suffice, nor does a ‘mere scintilla of evidence’” in support of the non-moving party’s case. Thompson v. Potomac Elec. Power Co., 312 F.3d 645, 649 (4th Cir. 2002) (quoting Phillips v. CSX Transp., Inc., 190 F.3d 285, 287 (4th Cir. 1999)).

III. Discussion

The Prison Litigation Reform Act (“PLRA”) mandates that an inmate exhaust “such administrative remedies as are available” before bringing suit under § 1983. 42 U.S.C. § 1997(e)(a) (“No action shall be brought with respect to prison conditions under section 1983 of this title, or any other Federal law, by a prisoner confined in any jail, prison, or other correctional facility until such administrative remedies as are available are exhausted.”); see also Anderson v. XYZ Corr. Health Servs., 407 F.3d 674, 677 (4th Cir. 2005). The administrative remedies are dictated by the prison. See Jones v. Bock, 549 U.S. 199, 218 (2007). A prison grievance procedure is “available” if it is “capable of use to obtain some relief for the action complained of.” Ross v. Blake, 136 S.Ct. 1850, 1855 (2016). The PLRA, therefore, has a “built-in exception to the exhaustion requirement: A prisoner need not exhaust remedies if they are not ‘available.’” Ross, 136 S.Ct. at 1855. The prisoner bears the burden of demonstrating that an administrative remedy is unavailable. See Graham v. Gentry, 413 Fed. Appx. 660, 663 (4th Cir. 2011) (“[I]n order to show that a grievance procedure was not ‘available,’ a prisoner must adduce facts showing that he was prevented, through no fault of his own, from availing himself of that procedure.”) (internal citation omitted).

Specifically, an administrative remedy is not “available”—meaning, the remedy, “although officially on the books, is not capable of use to obtain relief”—in at least three circumstances. Ross, 136 S.Ct. at 1859. First, “an administrative procedure is unavailable when (despite what regulations or guidance materials may promise) it operates as a simple dead end—with officers unable or consistently unwilling to provide any relief to aggrieved inmates.” Id. Meaning, the “administrative officials have apparent authority, but decline ever to exercise it.” Id. Second, a remedy is unavailable where the “administrative scheme might be so opaque that it becomes, practically speaking, incapable of use.” Id. In other words, “some mechanism exists to provide relief, but no ordinary prisoner can discern or navigate it.” Id. Last, an administrative remedy is not available “when prison administrators thwart inmates from taking advantage of a grievance process through machination, misrepresentation, or intimidation.” Id. at 1860. In this situation, “officials might devise procedural systems (including the blind alleys and quagmires just discussed) in order to trip up all but the most skillful prisoners” or threaten the inmate. Id. (internal quotation marks and citation omitted).

After a careful review of the record, including Defendants’ fifty-one page objections to the R & R, the Court finds that the Magistrate Judge correctly identified that Defendants failed to demonstrate there is no genuine dispute of material fact regarding whether the SCDC administrative procedure was unavailable to Plaintiff such that his suit is barred by the PLRA exhaustion requirement. Here, for example, the SCDC procedure operated as a “dead end” when, as Plaintiff alleges, his Step 1 Grievance regarding his June 30, 2016 stabbing by inmates was returned because Plaintiff did not attach an Request to Staff Member (“RTSM”) (Dkt. No. 14-4 at 3), even though an RTSM is not required for allegations of criminal conduct (Dkt. No. 14-2 ¶ 13.2). Similarly, as the Magistrate Judge noted, Plaintiff’s RTSMs arguably could have been treated as emergencies or allegations of criminal behavior warranting immediate attention pursuant to the SCDC administrative policy, but Plaintiff’s requests received no such attention. (Dkt. No. 15-1 at 11, 13, 16.) See, e.g., Mann v. Scott, No. No. 0:14-3474-RMG, 2015 WL 5165198, at *5 (D.S.C. Sept. 1, 2015) (“The Court finds that the prison’s failure to respond to Plaintiff’s RTS’s made an administrative remedy unavailable in this case, excusing his resulting failure to exhaust prior to filing suit. The Motion for Summary Judgment is denied as to its administrative exhaustion grounds.”); Martin v. McFadden, No. 0:15-1570-PMD-PJG, 2016 WL 3727493, at *2 (D.S.C. June 17, 2016) (denying defendants’ motion for summary judgment where prisoner received a response to his grievance “long after the time period established by SCDC policy”). Moreover, Plaintiff may have been “thwart[ed] from taking advantage of” the SCDC procedure by fear that an officer would make Plaintiff’s RTSMs public among inmates, especially in light of Plaintiff’s allegation that correctional officers had called him a “snitch.” (Dkt. No. 1-1 ¶ 45.) Construed in a light most favorable to Plaintiff, the record supports finding that the SCDC administrative process was unavailable to him in these instances.

Defendants object to the Magistrate Judge’s conclusion that administrative remedies were unavailable to Plaintiff and argue that, for example, (1) the Court should give deference to Defendants’ treatment of Plaintiff’s grievances because the prison administrative process is susceptible to multiple interpretations (Dkt. No. 34 at 4); (2) the Magistrate Judge “fail[ed] to recognize the basic tenants of the SCDC grievance process” in finding that Plaintiff filed a grievance regarding a September 5, 2017 attack (Id. at 9); and (3) Plaintiff’s general grievance history demonstrates that he was “NOT reasonably subjectively afraid to file complaints” (Id. at 11). The Court has carefully reviewed Defendants’ objections. Nonetheless, when appropriately construed in a light most favorable to Plaintiff, the record supports finding that Defendants were “consistently unwilling” to engage with Plaintiff’s grievances, which Defendants were empowered to consider, but nonetheless “declined [ ] to exercise” their authority to substantively review. Ross, 136 S.Ct. at 1853, 1859. In fact, courts have rejected defendants’ PLRA exhaustion requirement argument on a thinner record than what is before the Court here. See, e.g., Lyles v. Sterling, No. 9:17-149-CMC, 2018 WL 1737091, at *3 (D.S.C. Apr. 11, 2018) (denying defendants’ motion for summary judgment where facts alleged were insufficient to show remedies were unavailable). As a result, Plaintiff sufficiently demonstrated that administrative remedies were unavailable and Defendants failed to meet their burden on summary judgment of demonstrating that there is no genuine issue of material fact as to whether Plaintiff failed to satisfy the PLRA exhaustion requirement.

IV. Conclusion

For the foregoing reasons, the Court ADOPTS the R & R (Dkt. No. 27) as the Order of the Court and DENIES Defendants’ motion for summary judgment (Dkt. No. 14). This matter is REFERRED BACK to the Magistrate Judge for pre-trial proceedings.
